Guest Speaker Robyn N. Smith will present

Do You Have an Artificial Brick Wall?

Start the holidays off right by joining us for a great lunch and presentation by genealogist and historian Robyn Smith. We all talk about our “brick walls.” Often, these result from common errors we all make at times. Robyn will describe the thinking and practices that often create obstacles to solving our genealogical “brick walls.” She’ll discuss some better practices and development of new skills that often help solve many of our genealogical problems.

Ms. Smith has 18 years of experience in genealogical research. She is an author, blogger, teacher and lecturer. Her areas of expertise are Maryland research, African-American families and Slave-Era research, and Court Records research. Her interests include preserving the histories of African-American communities, encouraging genealogists to publish their family histories and promoting adherence to genealogical standards.
